METAL ROOFING

Standing seam metal roofing is the premier option for residential and commercial projects. Compared to shingles, metal roofing is longer-lasting, more aesthetically pleasing, more environmentally friendly, and saves building owners money over time.

While many project-specific factors will determine which metal roofing option is best for you, rest assured knowing standing seam metal is a tier above anything else on the market.

Metal roofing saves building owners money with a longer lifespan, and savings from energy efficiency.

Metal roofing is 100% recyclable and often made of pre and post-recycled material.

Metal roofing has an expected lifespan of over 50 years. Triple the expected life of a shingle roof.

When planning construction on your project, it's always important to keep geographical factors in mind to determine what the best option for you will be. Depending on where you live, many states offer rebate programs and insurance savings for using metal roofing. We always recommend checking with your contractor and insurance provider for more information.

COST SAVINGS

Initially, you can expect to spend more on standing seam metal roofing. This premium cost comes from superior products, and more highly trained installers. Over a metal roof's expected life, you can expect to replace a similar shingle roof two or three times. Additionally, shingle roofs require significantly more maintenance.

Further, by using metal roofing, you can expect to save between 10 and 15% on your energy bills. CMG's paint finishes are Ultra-Cool rated and meet ENERGY STAR requirements for cool roof certification.

ECO-FRIENDLY

In addition to energy efficiency, CMG metal roofing is also manufactured using high levels of pre and post-consumer recycled content. Further, all CMG metal roofing is 100% recyclable.

Compared to shingle roofing, metal roofing provides a smaller impact on the environment and is much more sustainable.
