The Cost of Vision Loss Injuries

A person who sustains an injury to the head or face can suffer debilitating partial or complete vision loss. These disabilities can lead to serious financial burdens due to a loss of the ability to work as well as high medical bills. However, if your eye injury was caused by another person's negligent or reckless actions, he or she may be obligated to compensate you for your damages.

Individuals injured in Cincinnati may want to consider turning to the attorneys of Stepleton Dugan, LLC, for help with their personal injury lawsuits. Our team can handle the legal intricacies of your case while you focus on healing and recovery.

Financial Burdens of a Vision Loss Injury

Vision loss, which can occur because of direct trauma to the eyes or even a brain injury, may leave a person with various visual issues. These injuries can cause anything from loss of visual acuity to complete, permanent blindness. As a result of these vision disabilities, an injured individual may be left facing the following financial burdens:

- Modifications to a home or workspace
- Medical treatment and recovery costs, often including expensive surgeries
- Lost wages, either from temporary leave or permanent loss of employment
- Loss of the ability to drive, which can impact a family's productivity or transportation options

Rather than handling these expenses on your own, you should talk to a dedicated personal injury lawyer for help with seeking the full compensation you deserve.
