KEEP CARGO ON THE MOVE

Brake-activated warning lamps are amber in color and act as a Class II strobe (pulsate) for up to 4 seconds with each application of the brake, then steadily burn red for the duration of the time the brake circuit is activated. The Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration (FMCSA) has granted vehicles operating trailer and van body trucks to install brake-activated pulsating lamps on the rear of their trailer in order to increase visibility and reduce the risk of rear-end collisions. See FMCSA-2020-0122 for more information.

INTAKE MANIFOLD RUNNER CONTROL MOTOR & ARM

PROBLEM: When certain Chevrolet Cruze or Sonic models with 1.8L ECOTEC engines throw a P2076 error code it's commonly the result of the factory tuning arm breaking, disconnecting from, and disabling the intake manifold runner control (IMRC) valve assembly. The factory design relies on a push-and-snap fit between two plastic parts that can wear to a nub, lose its connection to the assembly linkage, and can cause the IMRC motor to burn out. The dealer's solution is to have you purchase a costly new intake manifold that utilizes the same weak link in the IMRC motor arm setup.

OE FIX: This Dorman OE FIX IMRC assembly with upgraded tuning arm saves money and repair time by allowing the replacement of just the motor assembly. The improved tuning arm design is made to solidly capture the existing linkage, provide increased service life, and reduce future related repair costs.
