

TRUMP GOLD CARD

Individuals and corporate sponsors can register for the Gold Card by paying a nonrefundable $15,000 application fee per person, including derivatives. Once applicants receive confirmation that USCIS has accepted their registration and vetting is completed, applicants will then be instructed to pay the required fee of $1 million for each person requesting a Gold Card. A family of four would require a $4 million donation and sixty thousand dollars in filing fees. If a corporation or similar entity is filing on behalf of an individual, the required gift is $2 million for the principal applicant and $1 million for each derivative.

The applicant may be required to appear for an interview and/or provide biometrics at any time. If in the U.S., the applicant will receive a biometrics appointment notice by mail; if abroad, the notice will instruct the applicant to contact a U.S. Embassy/Consulate abroad to schedule the appointment.

The applicant will be granted lawful permanent resident status (equivalent to a green card).

The applicant can work and live anywhere in the U.S. and may, after meeting standard requirements, eventually apply for U.S. citizenship through naturalization.

Note, the Gold Card itself is not a special new card that alone gives citizenship — it's essentially a premium pathway to a permanent residency visa under existing immigration categories.

Source: USCIS, AILA

