

History of Perrotta's Marble Shop

Howard Ferrel was in World War I

Upon his return home, he married Edna Smith. They were both entrepreneurs; she opened a flower shop

He opened a filling station and a marble shop

Their daughters worked at the flower shop

Tony Perrotta was in World War II

Upon his return home, he married Jane Ferrel and learned marble work from her dad Howard.

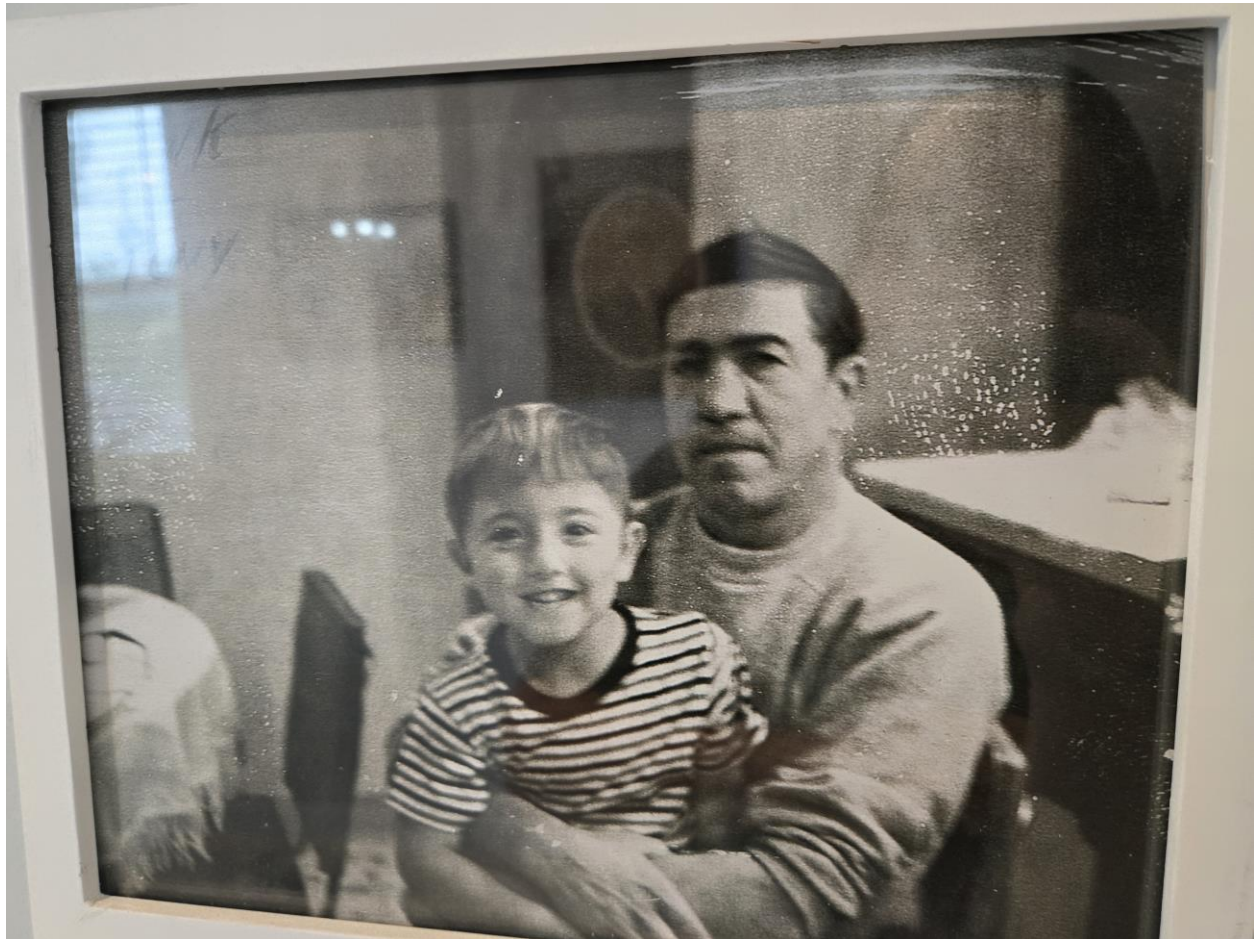

When Howard passed away, Tony and Jane bought her dad's saw from auction as well as some other tooling and materials, and they opened Perrotta's Marble Shop.

Their son Frank Perrotta always had a love for marble, he only ever wanted to be a marble man like his dad and grandpa.

Frank married Jackie Keenan. After Tony and Jane passed away, Frank continued to run the marble shop with Jackie, adding granite and quartz to their specialties. Their daughter Katie helps run the business now along with her husband John.

Frank passed away in 2024. Jackie Perrotta is the current owner of Perrotta's Marble Shop.
