WEIGHT POLICY

10,20,30, and 40yd containers have a 3 ton (6,000 lb) disposal limit. If the contents of the container exceeds the max limit, there is an extra charge of $50 per ton. We must be made aware at the time of placing an order, if extremely heavy debris such as; concrete, brick, dirt, rock, sand, roofing, plaster, or stucco, will be loaded.

To avoid any overweight charges, we can help try to determine the correct container size during ordering.

RENTAL POLICY

All containers have an initial rental period for use that is included with each order. If a container exceeds the initial rental time period, an additional $20 per day is applied or $100 per additional week. To avoid any rental charges, please call to have the container removed on or before the end of the rental time. We do not schedule the containers for removal, that is the customers responsibility. If you are concerned about exceeding the rental period and being charged, then we suggest a few things prior to ordering to take into consideration, such as, stockpiling as much debris as possible or ordering the correct size for the job.

Frequently Asked Questions

Q) Do you come and pick up the container automatically?

A) No, we do not remove containers automatically, unless under certain conditions (see below). It is the responsibility of the customer to schedule the removal. All rental fees accumulated will be processed prior to removal.

We require a phone call for any removal.

There are 2 conditions when we will remove containers.

- The job was paid for on delivery by cash and we cannot acquire a new method of payment such as credit card or payment at the office.
- We will call and leave a voicemail, or when voicemail isn't available, we will make at least 3 attempts of contacting the customer. After 24 hours and no response is received from the customer, the container will be scheduled for removal and any rental dues will be processed.

Q) Is it a problem if stuff is sticking over the "Level-Full Only" sign or over the top of the container?

A) We will not haul any box under these conditions. We have to be clear that this is non-negotiable. There are 3 causes for concern. 1) It is not safe for us to haul overloaded contents to the landfill or transfer station as items and contents shift dramatically, causing them to fall out which is a serious danger to others on the roadways. 2) It is against D.O.T. regulations for us to haul containers in this condition 3) This damages our equipment. All loads must be tarped and anything protruding will cause damage to the tarps, rendering them unusable.

Q) How long does it take to get a container?

A) This is a matter of availability. This fluxuates dramatically, especially when we hit 100% utilization (generally in peak season, summer time). We advise the best approach before taking on a project is to call for available dates and times and schedule it around that time frame. This will save you money and headaches in the future. As long as you have a current container on site that is needing either a swap out with an empty container or the container removed entirely, we can facilitate these requests generally the same day if early enough, or within 24 hours.

Q) I am not sure what size I need. Can you help?

A) Absolutely. Temporary dumpsters can be a bit tricky when trying to find the right size. We understand that saving money matters and we want to give you the right size for the job while minimizing under utilization. However, it is almost always better to get a size bigger than you might think you need instead of having to get 2 containers. For example, if you ordered a 10 yard at $300 and soon discover you have 12 yards of debris, you'll be short getting rid of that excess 2 yards. If you decide that a second container is needed, you'll be paying $600 total. If a 20 yard was ordered, it could accommodate the 12 yards, plus extra room to work with and have only paid $350 total.
